50X1-HUM

1. the Tientsin municipal government ordered each district within the city to form a security committee; these committees were to assist the local public security forces in detecting bandits and secret agents and also aid in the strengthening of winter defenses. Each committee was to have three sections, for youth, women, and the masses (sic) respectively. The head of each section was to be selected from members of the committee, while the committee members were to be selected by the various chu (0575) and chieh (5894) public security outposts.

50X1-HUM

2. the Tientsin Public Health Bureau issued a directive to the effect that all private clinics in Tientsin were to cease functioning and register with the bureau. The health bureau then intended to set up a number of joint clinics throughout the city and to appoint a chief physician of each clinic as well as from five to twenty physicians to serve under him. All service charges were to be standardized by the bureau, and physicians were to be paid a fixed salary; any profits arising from charges were to be turned over to the bureau.
